It provides alternative options outside of mainstream education syllabus that have a number of beneficial factors - more vocational (the student can see that doing things produces results), potential career path through engagement

No where near enough subjects offered, limited amount of GCSE's means limited options for further education!

View respondent's answers

The curriculum proposed offers an appropriate combination of GCSEs and other qualifications for the types of students being catered for. It is important to have kept a core of GCSE qualifications which will have relevance alongside an alternative provision which will be more appropriate and engaging and lead to better outcomes than a traditional secondary curriculum.

I would like to know how much time will be given over to PSHE education, and what format it will take. It is essential for all young people, for especially for those who will be attending the Ladder School. Please e-mail me an answer to this question (details given below). Also, I would like to register my interest in teaching PSHE at The Ladder School in future if possible.

Students can engage with employers directly to see what they are looking for and how the student might meet that requirement. Life stories from employers can also have a positive effect on the students as they can see that not all successful people come from the same background

Absolutely. It is important for the students to start thinking in an employment mindset where they have to be aware of the expectations of others. The right links will support the engagement of the students and prepare them for life after school, hopefully providing them with opportunities to gain employment which they would not otherwise have received.
